US-Saudi Arabia Relations

The United States share a longstanding and important security relationship with Saudi Arabia and are committed to their security and weapon systems needs to increase their capacity for self-defense.

Talking Points

General

- Saudi Arabia plays a crucial role in maintaining security in the Middle East, due to its economic, political, and cultural importance and its strategic location.
- The U.S. military has had a mil-to-mil relationship with Saudi Arabia for decades which includes military personnel from the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marines and Special Operation Forces providing training, advising, and assisting in a variety of mission areas.
- The Department of Defense has reviewed U.S. support for Saudi coalition in Yemen, and determined it was important to support them in defense of their own countries but also to restore the rightful government.
- We remain committed to providing the Saudi armed forces with the equipment, training, and follow-on support necessary to protect Saudi Arabia, and the region, from the destabilizing effects of terrorism and other threats.
- The DOD's limited non-combat support, such as intelligence sharing, focuses on assisting our partners in securing their borders from cross-border attacks from the Houthis and improving coalition processes and procedures, especially regarding compliance with the law of armed conflict and best practices for reducing the risk of civilian casualties.
- The U.S. military support to our partners mitigates noncombatant casualties, by improving coalition processes and procedures.
- The final decisions on the conduct of operations in the campaign are made by the members of the Saudi-led coalition, not the United States.

- [If pressed on details of U.S. support] We are not going to discuss publicly any specific support we may or may not have provided for operational security reasons.
- [If pressed] The support to Saudi-led coalition is not unconditional. They should do everything humanly possible to avoid any innocent loss of life, and support the U.N.-brokered peace process.

Subject: Death of Jamal Khashoggi

Purpose: Xxxx.

Overview: Xxx

Background: Following Saudi Arabia's 15 November announcement it would seek the death penalty for five suspects charged with the killing of Saudi journalist Jamal Khashoggi, President Trump on 20 November released a public statement reiterated continued support for the U.S.-Saudi bilateral relationship.

 The U.S. also announced implementation of sanctions against 17 suspects under the Global Magnitsky Act on 15 November, with reciprocal sanctions by the United Kingdom and Germany, who also imposed a travel ban covering the 26-nation Schengen zone.

Talking Points:

- Efforts should continue to establish the truth in a comprehensive and transparent manner.
- Our shared strategic interests with Saudi Arabia remain

If Pressed:

- I refer you to the President's statement, which stands for itself.

Mattis, who speaks with his Saudi counterparts often, was asked today whether he's talked to them about missing journalist Jamal Khashoggi: "we're monitoring this situation very closely."
